Born in Edinburgh in 1852, he was a Scottish missionary with a visionary spirit. His goal was to create a high-quality school for the children of the Baptist community, where they could learn both academic subjects and Christian values. To achieve this, he reached out to the Southern Baptist Convention in the USA, which assisted him in obtaining funds to buy land and construct the school's first building. He also appointed Miss Agnes Graham as the first director, who played a crucial role in organizing the institution.”
